Scenario 1 Joe:

Joe is a McDonald's worker who dropped out of high school and is planning to go back to college. He has not ever searched for a job outside of fast food and is worried about how to fill out applications for jobs when he has no experience. One day when he was complaining about his lack of knowledge in how to get a job one of his coworkers recommended an app to him. He downloaded the app and put his experience into the app and the app gave him back a list of classes that would give him experience he could use to have the experience necessary for a better job.

Scenario 2 Cathrine:

Catherine is a 22 year old senior at UNCC who is excited to graduate, but has never had a job. She has however helped out with research at UNCC and one time a fellow student working on the project told her about an app called next chapter and that it really helped her to find a job even though she did not have job experience. Catherine decided that she would download the app and see what the hype was about. She downloaded the app and put in her information and then even with her having no work experience the app connected her with a recruiter that was looking for a student that had some of the skills that the classes she had taken had given her.
